1 General hints

It is recommended that you use biblatex for consistent references in Unified style (see Leitfaden für die Gestaltung von schriftlichen Arbeiten und Unterlagen; März 2018). For normal inline references, use \textcite: sarfraz; for references in parentheses use \parencite: (sarfraz).

For quotation marks and quotations, use the macros provided by the package csquotes: "double quotation marks", 'single quotation marks', "an 'embedded' quotation". Quotation with references can be produced with \textquote and \textcquote: "A quote with reference" (sarfraz), even simpler "A quote with reference" (sarfraz).

For longer quotations, use displayquote or displaycquote:

There are also macros for omissions in quotations: [...], insertions: [my insertion] and combinations of both: [...][insertion after omission], [insertion before omission] [...]. Use the semantic markup provided by the class instead of manual shape change:

- Expressions (object language) in italics: The word Wort.
- Meaning is given in single quotes: 'meaning'
- Semantic concepts in small caps: the concept CONCEPT

Numbered linguistic examples can be produced by means of the example environment (for multi-line examples) and examples environment (for subsequent single-line examples):

1 General hints 4

(1.1) This is a multi-line example

It might consist of several paragraphs

- (1.2) This is a single-line example
- (1.3) Each paragraph gets its own number

It is recommended to refer to the examples like this: example ??. Also to chapters, incidentally: chapter ??.
